

New EU instruments against unemployment in time of crisis: the EU Project EATI

In order to face an unprecedented crisis which has radically and transversally jeopardized employment at EU level, the European Commission is financing instruments that have the goal to support those who, especially at an older age, need to look for a new job, maybe even in a different field, by updating and certifying their skills. This is the goal of the project European Adults Training and Internationalization \(EATI\), developed to address the issue of the employment in the European context, which has been emphasized by the COVID-19 pandemic.

EATI wants to provide free of charge, with an open and flexible approach, non-formal learning approaches and actual acknowledgments in terms of certifications.

In particular, the online platform which has been realized for the project allows to gain new qualifications through online courses focused on three main topics: English language (beginner and intermediate level), Entrepreneurship and ICT.

Moreover, the project puts at disposal of trainers and professionals the Methodological Manual titled “Balance of Key Competences for Universal School Certification”, downloadable from the website, which provides the methodological tools needed to identify formal and non-formal competences and skills at European level. Both the courses and the Manual are available in seven languages.

For what concerns the online courses, are already available non-formal learning activities such as crosswords or quizzes which can be combined with formal school methods; furthermore, the online courses give the opportunity to train remotely so to not necessarily force people to leave their territory for training needs.

At the end of each course, users will be able to download a certificate (valid at European level), providing a certified evaluation to those who are trying to re-enter the labour market, validating the competences they have acquired.

The resources of the project have been tested in six European Countries in order to guarantee their quality; EATI is the result of the international collaboration between organisations located in different European Countries: Escola profissional Epralima (Portugal), VITECO (Italy), e-Seniors Association (France), Learning for Integration (Finland), Fundacja Aktywni XXI (Poland), Centro Integrado Público de Formación Profesional Misericòrdia (Spain).
